

This is an aerial photograph of a rural area in Poland, specifically the Jarosław region. The landscape is characterized by a patchwork of agricultural fields in various shades of green and brown, interspersed with dark green forested areas. Several small settlements are visible, including Zawaliny, Dwornia, Jaroszew, Huta Zelechowska, Kłanica, Antonówka, Zakrzówek, Kotówka, Huta Zadybska, Stara Huta, and Glupianki. A prominent red dashed line runs diagonally across the map, likely representing a administrative boundary or a specific project area. A blue line, possibly a stream or canal, winds through the landscape. Several water bodies are labeled, including Staw Podstanski, Staw Sirochowski, Staw Popielcowy, and Antonowski Staw. The map is overlaid with a grid of coordinates, with latitude and longitude values visible along the edges.
